PART II: THE FIRST OF THE THREE GHOSTS

When Scrooge woke up, it was very dark. A clock struck twelve! Scrooge suddenly remembered, “Another ghost is coming at one o’clock.” He decided to lie awake until after one o’clock.

He waited and waited until at last he heard the clock strike One. At that moment, a light flashed in the room. And the curtains round his bed flew open.

Scrooge, sat up, and found himself face to face with a ghost.

It was very strange. It was the height of a child but it looked like an old man. Its long hair was white like an old man's, but there were no wrinkles on its face. It wore a white tunic. And a bright jet of light beamed out from the top of its head. It held a big cap under its arm.

- beamed: shone; came out of
- face to face: looking at
- flashed: shone suddenly
- flew open: opened quickly and suddenly
- jet: strong, thin line
- wrinkles: lines on people’s faces showing age
“Are you the ghost that Marley told me about?” asked Scrooge.

“I am!”

“I am the Ghost of Christmas Past.”

“Why have you come?” asked Scrooge.

“For your welfare!” said the Ghost. “Now stand up and walk with me!”

When Scrooge saw the Ghost move towards the window, he was frightened. “I’m a mortal,” said Scrooge, “I’ll fall.”

The Ghost laid its hand on Scrooge’s heart and said, “You won’t fall!”

As it spoke, they passed through the wall. And they stood on a country road. There was no mist or darkness now. It was a clear, cold, winter’s day. And there was snow on the ground.

“Good Heavens!” said Scrooge, as he looked about him. “I grew up here. I was a boy here!”

They walked along the road. And Scrooge recognised every tree and every gate. Some ponies were trotting towards them with boys on their backs. All these boys were happy and shouting to each other.

Glossary

• Good Heavens!: I’m surprised
• grew up: (here) passed my years as a child
• laid: (v. to lay) placed; put
• mist: fine vapour like a low cloud
• mortal: person; human (can’t live forever)
• ponies: small horses
• trotting: moving (slowly) of horse
“They are only shadows,” said the Ghost. “They can’t see us.”

Scrooge knew all the boys. But why was he so happy to see them? Why was he happy when they called Merry Christmas to each other? What was Merry Christmas to Scrooge? “What good has it ever done me?” he asked himself.
“The school is not quite empty,” said the Ghost. “One child is still there.”

“I know,” said Scrooge with a tear in his eye.

They soon came to a large, red-brick building. They entered the gloomy hall and walked to a door at the back of the building. It opened before them, and they saw a long, empty classroom. At one of the desks a lonely boy was reading a book. Scrooge sat down on a bench and wept when he saw himself.

“I wish,” Scrooge muttered, after drying his eyes with his sleeve, “but it’s too late now.”

“What’s the matter?” asked the Ghost.

“Nothing,” said Scrooge. “There was a boy singing a Christmas carol at my door last night. I would like to give him some money. That’s all.”

The Ghost smiled thoughtfully, and said, “Let’s see another Christmas!”

Glossary

- red-brick: a type of building
- sleeve: arm of a shirt, jumper or coat
- tear: water from your eye when you cry
- wept: (v. to weep) cried
- What’s the matter: What is the problem?
They left the school behind them, and a moment later they were in a busy city. It was Christmas time again but it was evening.

The Ghost stopped at a warehouse door.

“Do you recognize this place?” asked the Ghost.

“I was an apprentice here!” said Scrooge.

They went in. Scrooge saw an old gentleman sitting behind a high desk. “It’s old Fezziwig!” he said, excitedly. Old Fezziwig rubbed his hands and laughed. Then he called out in a rich, fat, cheerful voice, “Ebenezer! Dick!” Scrooge’s former self, now a young man, came quickly into the room, with Dick, the other apprentice.

“Dick Wilkins!” said Scrooge to the Ghost. “There he is. We were very good friends.”

- apprentice: person working and learning how to do a job
- cheerful: happy
- former self: person (he) was when he was younger
- rubbed his hands: moved his hands together (usually when you are happy)
- shutters: wooden or metal covers on the outside of a window
- warehouse: large building to store goods in
The two young men ran into the street and closed the shutters.

“Clear everything away*, boys. Let’s make some room for the party!”

It was done in a minute. They washed the floor. They put coal on the fire and soon the warehouse was the cosiest*, warmest, brightest* ballroom*. In came a fiddler* with a music book. In came Mrs Fezziwig, with a big smile on her face. In came the three pretty Miss Fezziwigs. In came the six young men whose hearts they broke. In came all Mr Fezziwig’s employees. In they all came, one after another. And soon there were twenty couples dancing round the room. There were dances, and there were games, and more dances. And there was cake, and there was beef*, and there were mince pies and lots of beer. When the clock struck eleven, the party finished. Mr and Mrs Fezziwig stood by the door. They said goodbye to everybody as they left. And they wished them a Merry Christmas. For the whole time, Scrooge imagined he was in the scene with his former self. He remembered everything and enjoyed everything.

“It was so easy,” said the Ghost, “to make these people happy.”

“Easy?!” repeated Scrooge.

The Ghost told Scrooge to listen to the two apprentices. They were praising* Fezziwig. And then he said, “He has only spent a few pounds of your mortal money. Does he really deserve* all this praise?”

Scrooge was angry at the Ghost’s remark. “It isn’t about money, Ghost,” he said, speaking like the young Scrooge. He has the power to make us happy or unhappy. He can make our work easy or difficult. The happiness he gives is worth a fortune in gold.” Then suddenly Scrooge stopped talking.

“What’s the matter?” asked the Ghost.

“Nothing,” said Scrooge.

“No,” said Scrooge, “No. I would like to be able to talk to my clerk now. That’s all.”

As Scrooge spoke, his former self turned down the lamps. And Scrooge and the Ghost stood side by side in the open air.

“I haven’t got much time left,” said the Ghost. “Quick!”

Scrooge saw himself again. He was older now. And his face showed signs of greed.

He was not alone. He was sitting by a pretty young girl. There were tears in her eyes.

“Belle,” Scrooge said quietly.

Glossary

- greed: when you want more than you need
- power: strength; ability
- remark: words; what he said
- side by side: next to each other
- turned down: made the light less bright
“Another idol has replaced me,” Belle said, softly.

“What idol has replaced you?”

“A golden one,” replied Belle. “I’ve seen you lose all your good ambitions. And now all you are interested in is making money.”
